Park at the new bridge crossing of the River Helmsdale at the entrance to Borrobol Lodge, on the A897 about 5km south of Kinbrace. Take the estate road across the bridge, across the railway line, past the front of Borrobol Lodge and westwards past estate and farm cottages and buildings. A clear track heads west-south-west and this should be followed for about 3km, at which point a rough track heads down to the north-west end of Loch Ascaig, where fishing boats are moored. A bridge crosses the stream into the loch here, and from this point, there are some faint Argo tracks leading up onto the northern shoulder of Creag nam Fiadh. Walk up on to the shoulder and follow a southerly route across heather and some boggy ground for about 2km until the summit is reached. A trig point marks the spot.
