Foreword

Like the hydro-electric power stations that are dotted around the country, sensitively positioned wind farms should contribute to the social, environmental and economic wellbeing of people throughout the UK. One of the most important social impacts associated with wind energy is the provision of wind farm funds. These funds share the value of generating electricity from wind with local communities. SSE has been providing these funds for more than a decade. Over those years the funds have grown in number, status and impact, and now, SSE provides funding to communities through 25 funds in Great Britain, the vast majority of which are in Scotland.

In 2014, SSE published its first annual review of its wind farm funds, showing exactly how each pound was spent. We did that because the funds have reached a scale that, we believe, deserved greater transparency. Publishing the detail of the funds is important for two reasons.

The first is to highlight the excellent funding decisions made by community panels and trusts and the impact they are making. It makes us, at SSE, very proud to see the hundreds of different projects across the country that are being supported by our wind farms. The second reason is to inspire communities to develop new projects by showing the kinds of innovative ideas being realised in other areas. Funding of this scale can energise, reinvigorate and transform communities and we are very conscious we have a duty to create the conditions whereby communities can make the most of that opportunity.

So, building on our first report last year, the 2014/15 report further demonstrates the scale and diversity of community development in the areas and regions around SSE's wind farms. From enterprising projects that support young apprentices in some of our most remote communities to energy solutions for affordable housing, it is clear to me that local people are making good judgements and are making their communities more sustainable places to live and visit.

SSE is a company for the long-term and we like to think we remain rooted in the communities we work, live and serve. A commitment has been made to support people who live near our wind farms for the 25 year life of the turbines. This annual review – and the ones that will follow – simply demonstrates our intent to make sure those funds have the best possible impact they can. And by doing so, we help to share the value of renewable energy and support healthy, active and vibrant communities.

Our commitment

SSE seeks to be a responsible developer of renewable energy. That means we must consider carefully the social and environmental impacts of every project before proceeding to develop. It also means we make sure local communities share in the economic value that is created. One of the best ways to do that is by providing funds for community benefit.

SSE's onshore wind farms and hydro-electric stations now support 25 grant-making community funds across Great Britain. Since 2002, we've committed over £19 million and supported more than 5,000 local projects. These funds are long-term sources of finance which will see communities benefit over the lifetime of each development, usually 25 years. In providing funding, we seek to enable local regeneration through community-led economic, social and environmental development.

We're proud to help communities grow and build strong foundations for the future. To this end, we've set out five clear commitments for the way we manage our funds.

1 Keep it simple

We make the grant making process as straightforward as possible and look to remove some of the barriers which may hinder community development. There's no need to over complicate these things and experience tells us that complexity can be a deterrent for communities. We use a simple application form and, where required, we offer community groups additional support with their proposals.

We provide robust governance to ensure that funds are being spent appropriately, but not in a way that is onerous to either applicants or our panels and trusts.

2 Work together

We believe a strong partnership between a funder and the community means effective collaboration and, ultimately, a fund that works for everyone.

SSE takes an active role in fund administration, working with each panel or trust directly. We are committed to local decision-making, empowering communities to support the projects that matter most to them. We hope that by taking a hands-on role, we can effect real change and build greater trust with communities. A key part of this involves maintaining consistent and open communication with the whole community.

3 Listen hard

Our Community Investment team regularly meets local groups to hear their thoughts and aspirations. While we're always at the end of the phone to chat through any issues, it's often most effective to meet face-to-face to discuss project ideas. By working as an active partner in this way, we can develop a breadth of local knowledge to inform and improve our grant-making.

We listen hard to the changing needs of local people and adapt our grant-making processes in response. We've committed to peer reviews of our funds and regular funding surgeries to ensure we're meeting expectations. We're also having conversations about community co-investment in our developments to further share the value of our projects with local communities.

How we calculate a fund

A 50MW onshore wind farm provides:

Total annual value – £250,000
(£5,000 per megawatt of installed capacity x 50)

£125,000 (50%) per year ring-fenced for local community fund

£125,000 (50%) per year allocated to regional Sustainable Development Fund

Action

4 Be flexible

Each of SSE's funds has a 25 year lifespan – we're in this for the long haul. To create effective long-term partnerships with communities, we have to be flexible when it comes to individual community priorities. Although consistency is important, we understand that a 'one size fits all' approach is not always the best option and that the needs of a community can change significantly over time. Our approach is to work with communities to find the best model and agree to review it on a regular basis.

Our core focus will always be an open grant-making fund, but we're also speaking with communities to pilot a range of initiatives within our fund structure that deliver targeted benefit to individuals, such as fuel poverty prevention and energy efficiency schemes.

5 Create a legacy

We hope that in the coming years our grant-making programme will continue to evolve and change for the better. The word 'legacy' is often debated but we believe that true and lasting legacy comes from implementing real change that makes a long-lasting difference to people's lives. We encourage communities to think big and hope that initiatives such as community ownership, apprenticeship schemes and setting up endowment funds will go some way to meeting this aim.

We're also piloting small grants for rural micro businesses and believe this new venture could bring unique opportunities for local economies in our areas of development. With planned investment of over £200 million over the next 25 years, it's exciting to see where the funds will go next.

Our funding process

At an early stage and separate to the planning process, we share our community investment policy with the local wind farm liaison group.

Once a project receives planning consent, we consult with local stakeholders to agree the area of benefit and fund delivery arrangements.

We work with the local community to either set up a decision-making panel or enter into agreement with a nominated community organisation, such as a development trust.

On the start of major construction, we organise a fund launch event and invite initial applications.

Applications undergo an assessment. Funding decisions are made by the panel or trust at meetings throughout the year.

A final evaluation report is submitted by the applicant on the project and its outcomes.

Working together

The success of our funding programme relies on local decision makers who volunteer their time to award grants in their local area. They are responsible for helping hundreds of projects come to fruition every year and their passion, hard work and commitment is invaluable.

From Orkney to Essex, every community we work with is unique, with its own priorities and aspirations for development. By listening to the views of local experts, we can best ensure that the right projects are supported and that the fund meets the needs of the wider community both now, and in the long-term.

"After years of attending countless meetings about the wind farm. I was keen to discover how things were going to work out and if this project was going to produce the community benefits we had hoped for.

I am very happy to say our hopes have been more than realised and I have great praise for the way we as a community have been respected, treated and considered.

In just a year, the fund has already worked wonders in our North Sutherland communities. As well as those local businesses, shops, hotels, and bed and breakfast establishments which were busy all winter during the construction of the wind farm, the fund itself has enabled many of our village halls to upgrade their buildings and facilities and our clubs to renew equipment. The swimming pool, MUGA pitch, football clubs and local schools have all been supported. Not to mention the fencing and cattle grids which surround our township.

With the help of SSE, we look forward to planning what is best for our communities in future years so that a lasting benefit may be established in this very fragile part of the world where perhaps we were either overlooked or forgotten before."

Janette Mackay
Chair of Strathly and Armadale Community Council

"As an elected member on the panel I take real pride in discussing and approving the applications that come into the committee. We are a diverse group from all walks of life and when we come together the decisions we make are for the greater good of the community which gives me a real feel good factor."

Jane Ellis
Toddleburn Panel

"Helping to disburse the community fund in its first year has been a hugely rewarding experience as our fragile community has never before had access to anything resembling it under local control. I am confident that the community will rise to the opportunities offered and maximise the usefulness of the fund in the years to come."

Jim A. Johnston
Secretary of Bettyhill, Strathnaver and Altnaharra Community Council

"I've been on the panel for three years and have enjoyed seeing our communities' money support a wide range of people and projects. It feels good to support applications which have a meaningful legacy. We often make suggestions which ensure the fund goes further and lasts longer."

Alistair Rennie
Fairburn Panel

"Our community could never dream of receiving this much secure investment over such a long period of time from any other sources. I am so pleased that the panel is not made up of folk in an office in the big city that have no idea about our area or struggles, but made up of people who have the knowledge and understanding to make the right decisions."

"The funding we receive from SSE has made a real difference to our community. It allows us to operate a grant scheme that benefits all community groups and has helped us secure employment of three community caretakers. Lately, we started a joint apprenticeship scheme with neighbouring trusts and have created six apprenticeships in 18 months."

Linda Whiteside
Chair of Fort Augustus and Glenmoriston Community Company

"It is a privilege and a pleasure to chair this dedicated and vibrant group of representatives from the five local community councils involved as we head for our second million-pound milestone of approved awards. It is certainly rewarding to play a vital part in this long-term partnership with SSE."

Douglas Craik
Chairperson, Griffin and Calliachar Panel

"In my role at SSE I've worked with many communities across the country and have seen the amount of time and effort which is invested in the funds by both the panel members and the applicants alike. I greatly admire their dedication and enthusiasm. It's clear how much each community genuinely cares about what happens in their area."

Ciara Wilson
Community Funds Manager at SSE

Funder's Report 2014/15

It's been a year of progress for the SSE community investment programme, with a growing number of funds, a diverse range of awards and some exciting new ideas taking shape.

We have worked with community panels and trusts across our 25 community funds to make almost £3 million in grant awards to 414 projects. This includes the first awards from Strathly North wind farm on the north coast of Sutherland, and important funding milestones for our Clyde and Drumderg funds, which reached a total spend of £2 million and £500,000 respectively.

Total value of the projects supported by our funds in 2014/15

With a total project value of over £24 million, some eight times the value of our grants, it's encouraging to see the impact our contribution is having to support funding from other sources.

Given reduced opportunities for public funding, it is also no surprise that our average fund demand remains high at 147% – with our regional sustainable development funds the most popular, attracting £5 in application value for every £1 available.

A long-term view

Many of our funds have been active for a number of years now. In these cases, communities have begun to recognise the need for more targeted, coordinated community development in order to make the most of their funding.

Fund panels at Gordonbush and Achary undertook reviews of their fund objectives, looking to focus on long-term projects that will leave a legacy, and several funds have investigated the potential to save beyond the 25-year period with investment in an endowment fund.

Our panels and trusts awarded over £152,000 towards employment and skills development, with 79 training positions directly supported through the funds. It's clear that opportunities for local jobs are a priority, particularly in rural areas, with over £100,000 invested in apprenticeship schemes alone.

Making the difference

It's also the case that small grants often have a big impact. 84% of our awards this year were for grants up to £10,000. A £100 micro grant for the local toddler group or £5,000 to support a young apprentice, while lower in value, can make a big difference where it matters most.

Major strategic projects have also played their part this year, with some key awards which will provide a real and lasting legacy for the future. The Erich Trust was awarded £40,000 towards a community buy out of a disused school in Blairgowrie for redevelopment as a community cinema and venue. The children of Crawford in South Lanarkshire were successful in their bid for a much needed play park which was granted £148,000. And in Highland Perthshire, a major high speed broadband project was given a £50,000 boost to train and employ local technicians.

Another key theme which emerged in 2014/15 was rural self-sufficiency during times of severe weather. A difficult winter prompted a number of communities to set up local resilience initiatives and we received requests for equipment such as snow ploughs, cold weather kits and hand held radios. It was fantastic to see communities taking the initiative in this way and a total of £48,000 was awarded to emergency community teams across the country.

Regional development

The regional funds have brought a new dynamic to our funding programme by creating opportunities for strategic initiatives with the potential to affect wider community development in the long-term. During 2014/15, two new regional funds were launched in the Scottish Borders and Perth and Kinross. The independent panel awarded 18 projects across the two funds a total of £372,122. Our Highland Sustainable Development Fund will reopen in October 2015, and with a budget of £1 million, we look forward to helping many more major projects get off the ground.

Community Trusts Apprenticeship Scheme

Highland Sustainable Development Fund
£87,250 awarded April 2014

Three community organisations in the Great Glen are working together to offer apprenticeships to 14 local young people over the next three years.

The Fort Augustus and Glenmoriston Community Company (FAGCC), Stratherrick and Foyers Community Trust and Glengarry Trust work to identify young people looking for apprenticeships and place them with local businesses that would otherwise not be able to employ an apprentice. In an area with few employment opportunities, the scheme gives young people the chance to live and work in the local area. The award to FAGCC has allowed the groups to expand the number of apprenticeships on offer to local young people. Four of the placements will be specifically for over 19s, for whom it is more difficult to access funding.

Ben Armitage, an apprentice with the scheme, is training on the job at The Lock Inn towards SVQ3 in Professional Cookery.

"I am very grateful to have been given the opportunity to learn and gain experience at the same time. It has spurred me on to follow a career in catering."

Making a difference Skills and employment

Enterprising opportunities

One of the most rewarding outcomes of the funds is the ability to create new opportunities for learning, training and employment; so important in ensuring the long-term survival of fragile rural economies.

Over £177,000 was invested in training, jobs and apprenticeships in 2014/15. Many of the grants for skills and training were directed at helping young people prepare for the world of work; from SQA employability awards to bike mechanic certificates – these initiatives provide invaluable life skills and qualifications to help participants reach positive destinations.

Cairngorms Skills Project

Highland Sustainable Development Fund
£57,000 awarded April 2014

More than 40 young people across the Highlands can now benefit from support to enter careers in construction or forestry related industries.

In remote rural areas that often lack training and employment opportunities, young people can often be restricted to seasonal or low-skilled work. The Cairngorms Skills Project, led by the Highland Small Communities Housing Trust, is being expanded across the whole Highland region and will help 14 young people, each year for the next three years, with their applications to study construction or forestry related courses at college. The Trust provides support such as training and transport costs, and also arranges local work placements.

"The project has helped me excel in my college studies and also gain practical experience. The funding has made things a lot easier and without this support I would struggle to be where I am now."

Heather Coyle
HNC Forestry trainee

"The training programme reaches young people who have fewer opportunities due to their rural location and helps them to develop in positive ways."

Mark Sinclair
The Bike Station

The Bike Station

Griffin and Calliachar
£20,000 awarded December 2014

The afterschool 'build your own bike' course gives 30 young trainees the opportunity to gain bicycle mechanic skills.

The sessions, held at Breadalbane Academy, involve 24 young people being peer mentored by six previous graduates of the course. The mentors work towards Silver Velotech standards, whilst supporting the trainees to achieve Bronze Velotech certificates – recognised vocational qualifications. The trainees work on donated bikes which are sold when completed, with income reinvested back into the project. The course helps young people remain engaged with education, building their self-esteem and equipping them with practical skills which can lead them into fulfilling careers.

Strong foundations

Robust facilities and services form part of the fabric of communities so it's no surprise that nearly half of our grants were awarded to improving and enhancing these provisions in 2014/15.

Over £1.2 million was invested in establishing new facilities and developing existing services this year. From rural development to supporting the elderly and the vulnerable, the diversity of projects is testament to the strong sense of community that exists in our areas of development.

Allt Beag Market Garden

Strathly North
£6,860 awarded May 2014

The Allt Beag Armadale Trust is redeveloping the Allt Beag Croft into a market garden for community use.

The Allt Beag Croft, situated in a stunning location overlooking Armadale Beach in North Sutherland, was lying vacant for many years until the Trust purchased it in 2002. With the help of local volunteers, the Trust has redeveloped the site to make it productive once again. The award allowed the group to purchase a polytunnel to increase productivity of the garden and protect crops from the wild elements of the north coast. They were also able to buy a shed to safely store equipment for the garden. The fruit and vegetables grown will be sold, with profits made reinvested into the project.

"The shed and polytunnel are helping us achieve our long-term objective – producing locally grown fruit and vegetables for sale in the community."

Margaret Mackay
Allt Beag Armadale Trust

"The Hub empowers service users to engage with life, support each other and contribute to their community. It also provides valuable respite for families and carers."

Esther Brown
Engaging With Activity

Helmsdale Dementia Activity Programme

Gordonbush
£5,000 awarded September 2014

Helmsdale and District Community Association (HDCA) runs weekly activities for people in rural East Sutherland living with dementia.

An active social life is important for people living with dementia, helping them to maintain their health and wellbeing. The award allowed HDCA, working with service provider Engaging with Activity, to deliver this invaluable work to support vulnerable individuals. Weekly activities include Tai Chi, crafts and cookery classes. Participating in these activities helps individuals with dementia improve their self-esteem and reduces social isolation. While most of the service users suffer from dementia, activities also cater for users with learning difficulties and mobility diseases.

Food Train

Clyde Dumfries and Galloway
£11,500 awarded September 2014

The Food Train provides a grocery shopping delivery service for elderly members of the community in Dumfries and Galloway who are unable to go to the shops themselves.

The charity aims to support people aged 65 and over to maintain their independence and stay in their own homes for as long as possible. To achieve this, it undertakes various initiatives including a grocery shopping delivery service, household support service and more recently a befriending service helping those experiencing isolation and loneliness.

The service is delivered by local volunteers, some of whom have been involved for 10 years since the project began in 1995. The award has allowed the Food Train to purchase an additional delivery vehicle for their grocery service, enabling volunteers to make deliveries to even more elderly people.

"The addition of the new van to our delivery fleet will enable us to continue to provide this vital and much needed service to support even more elderly people in the local area."

Helen McAnespie
Food Train

Comrie Development Trust

Perth and Kinross Sustainable Development Fund
£36,350 awarded March 2015

Visitors to Comrie in Perthshire will be able to enjoy the unique experience of staying the night at an ex-Prisoner of War camp.

Cultybraggan Camp is the last remaining WWII high security POW camp in the UK. Owned by the Comrie Development Trust on behalf of the community, the 90 acre camp provides space for allotments, community groups, events and recreation. The camp is a significant employer in the area, housing 18 businesses and providing around 50 full-time equivalent jobs.

The Trust now has exciting new plans to turn 10 of the 80 Nissen huts on site, which housed the prisoners, into self catering accommodation. The award will allow the huts to be connected to a biomass boiler, which will provide the heat they need without contributing to climate change.

“The one-of-a-kind accommodation will encourage more visitors to Cultybraggan to learn about the camp’s heritage. Connecting the huts to the biomass boiler has the added bonus of reducing CO₂ emissions significantly.”

Naomi Clarke
Comrie Development Trust

Making a difference Culture, heritage and tourism

Vibrant communities

A rich cultural, artistic and social calendar is vital to encourage community spirit and to bolster the visitor economy. Some unique projects are telling the story of their local heritage this year.

Comrie’s interesting military connections have been brought to light again with the redevelopment of 10 Nissen huts into self catering accommodation at Cultybraggan Camp, and the mining history of Leadhills in South Lanarkshire has been given a new musical platform in the reforming of its silver band. In 2014/15, over 65 community events and festivals also received grants.

Aberfeldy Farmers' Market

Griffin and Calliachar
£12,000 awarded December 2014

Last year the Aberfeldy Farmers' Market showcased the very best of Perthshire's larder.

Run by the Aberfeldy Small Business Association (ASBA), the monthly market has already made a name for itself, attracting some of the best small retailers in Perthshire and allowing locals and visitors to purchase directly from producers. For the first time, shops in the town are opening on a Sunday to take advantage of the visitors drawn to the market during the summer months. The award, being delivered over three years, is allowing ASBA to develop the market into a self-funding event that will increase visitor footfall in Aberfeldy, benefitting local businesses.

“The market has been embraced by visitors and locals alike, enhancing the shopping experience and supporting local businesses through increased footfall.”

Jenny Langrish
Aberfeldy Small Business Association

“Having decent instruments has made an enormous difference. As well as sounding better, we have been able to plan a larger concert outside the village, which wouldn’t have been possible before.”

Teresa Brasier
Leadhills Silver Band

Leadhills Silver Band

Clyde South Lanarkshire
£23,174 awarded April 2014

Until recently, the Leadhills Silver Band had been playing on instruments that were over 100 years old.

Originally a miners band, Leadhills Silver Band was disbanded when the mines shut. After discovering the original brass instruments were lying disused in storage, a small group of local residents reformed the band in 2010. Thanks to the award, they now have a new set of instruments, allowing the old ones to finally be retired. As brass instruments are expensive, the new equipment means the band can be fully inclusive and give all members the opportunity to play. The group performs regularly at community events, greatly enjoyed by the older members of the community who are delighted by the rekindling of the band.

Thriving youth

With around £426,000 invested in projects that support a younger demographic in 2014/15, it's clear that encouraging the next generation continues to be a key priority across our funds.

Younger members of the community are often at the heart of these projects, from designing a dream play park, to writing letters of support, and carrying out local fundraising. Their enthusiasm is the driving force behind many of the applications we receive.

Bananas Playgroup

Clyde Borders
£2,812 awarded in April 2014 and March 2015

Children at Bananas Playgroup in the Scottish Borders are getting messy with their new 'mud kitchen' and play shelter.

The mud kitchen was installed earlier this year in the playgroup's garden at Broughton Primary School, with an award of £822. The kitchen consists of wooden units and cooking equipment, letting the children learn and explore the outdoors in a creative way. The group was also awarded a grant of £1,990 from the fund last year for an outdoor play shelter, meaning the children can enjoy daily outdoor singing and dancing sessions. The garden area is now well equipped for outdoor learning, which is a vital part of a child's development.

"The play shelter and mud kitchen have totally changed the children's outdoor learning experience, and the 'puddle suits' mean they can be outside everyday, whatever the weather."

Christine Parker
Bananas Playgroup

"It's amazing to see the children running around and enjoying the new play park equipment."

Julie Reed
Friends of Ealand Park

Friends of Ealand Park

Keadby
£20,000 awarded April 2014

Toddlers in Ealand can now enjoy a brand new play park thanks to one of the largest awards from the Keadby fund to date.

Ealand Park provides the only outdoor play and leisure venue in the village, without which local children would have to travel almost two miles to the nearest park. Friends of Ealand Park, set up by three determined teenagers, has updated the toddler playground which now includes swings, a tornado spinning dish and a pirate ship. The new toddler area offers the children a fully equipped, safe play space within easy walking distance from their homes.

The Young Karers East Sutherland (TYKES)

Gordonbush
£4,320 awarded September 2014

TYKES supports young carers in East Sutherland, offering a drop in service where they can socialise and take part in activities.

The group was established in 1999 when research highlighted that 4% of young people in the area were caring for a family member with little extended support. The Gordonbush community fund keenly backs the group's work and has previously supported the project with an award of £4,000 towards the costs of employing a sessional worker.

This year's award will allow the group to provide trips for young carers, including daily outings and three overnight respite stays. Young people with caring responsibilities can often experience feelings of isolation through the role that they undertake at home. Respite breaks allow them to develop social skills, make friends who share the same burdens and understand that they are not alone. But most importantly, it gives them the chance to be a child.

"TYKES helped me to realise I'm not alone as a young carer. If I've had a bad day at school, I know I can go to TYKES and just chill out."

Alyson MacKay
TYKES club member

Active lives

A diverse range of sporting and outdoor pursuits were backed through the funds with grants totalling over £505,000 in 2014/15. This variety is encouraging, especially in rural areas where access to services can often be limited.

From swimming to skiing, fishing to football, groups across the country are being increasingly ambitious in their aspirations for quality sports provision in their area. These kinds of projects are invaluable in promoting positive wellbeing and encouraging healthy lifestyles for local people.

Lowther Hills Ski Club

Clyde South Lanarkshire
£4,995 awarded July 2014

Lowther Hills Ski Club has expanded its facilities near Leadhills in South Lanarkshire, through the purchase of a 600 metre rope tow.

The club, which runs the only ski tows still in operation in the south of Scotland, acquired the 600 metre long rope tow from a Pennine-based ski club. The rope tow was relocated to the slopes of Lowther Hill, where it has opened access to a new hillside. The award has also bought essential equipment for the maintenance of the slopes, helping to bring the facilities up to modern standards.

“As the only snowsports facility of this kind in the south of Scotland, we hope the Ski Club will play an important part in the economic regeneration of the area.”

Anjo Abelaira
Lowther Hills Ski Club

“The new boats are making a real difference to the quality of experience we can offer, helping the club contribute to improving angling tourism here in Ross-shire.”

Stephen Dowds
Loch Achonachie Anglers Club

Loch Achonachie Anglers Club

Fairburn
£10,000 awarded August 2014

Loch Achonachie Anglers Club has purchased new boats and engines to improve the fishing experience for members and visitors.

The club controls salmon and wild brown trout fishing on various lochs and rivers in the Marybank, Scatwell and Strathconon areas in Ross-shire. Until recently, it was using old unreliable plastic boats and outboard engines that no longer met EU emission regulations. The purchase of three new aluminium ‘unsinkable’ boats and four new engines means members and visitors can fish on the waters in a secure and enjoyable environment. The new equipment will make the experience safer, allowing them to attract younger members and also help the club to promote the area as a fishing tourism destination.

North Coast Leisure Centre

Strathly North
£15,000 awarded December 2014

Children in North Sutherland are able to gain valuable life skills through the swimming and mobility classes held at the North Coast Leisure Centre in Bettyhill.

The award has allowed the Tongue and Farr Sports Association, that runs the centre, to continue covering the staffing costs of the lessons. Held three days a week for babies, toddlers and young children, the classes give local children the opportunity to attend swimming lessons without having to travel what can be more than a 60 mile roundtrip to access similar services – particularly important in such a remote rural setting.

The leisure centre provides a range of activities which local residents would struggle to access if they didn't have the facility. The water confidence classes provide a vital service to local young people in this coastal region.

“When Euan started swimming lessons six months ago, he wouldn't go near the water without armbands. Now he can't wait until the lessons and is even starting to swim a breadth unaided.”

Helmsdale Housing Project

Highland Sustainable Development Fund
£24,306 awarded April 2014

Helmsdale and District Development Trust is ensuring its new innovative housing project is truly sustainable through the installation of energy efficiency measures.

The four houses are 100% community owned and represent the first affordable housing to be built in the Highland village of Helmsdale for 35 years. The houses were completed in December 2014 with the first tenants moving in only a few days later, in time for Christmas.

The award allowed the Trust to install solar panels as part of the energy efficiency measures, not only reducing the carbon footprint of the buildings, but also lowering energy bills for the families that moved in earlier this year. The income generated from the solar panels is invested by the Trust into other community initiatives.

"The solar panels make a huge difference in keeping the bills down, taking us out of fuel poverty and having a positive impact on our lives. We can now afford the little things we couldn't before."

Sustainable surroundings

Protecting the natural environment and taking measures to reduce energy consumption within the community are important initiatives which we strongly encourage. In 2014/15, over £230,000 was awarded to projects which take an active role in addressing these challenges.

Enhancing local surroundings was a leading theme, with over £80,000 awarded to rural path networks and scenic walk development and £19,500 for community renewable schemes. A number of energy efficiency measures were supported, including a major affordable housing project in Sutherland.

Williestruther Loch Walk

Scottish Borders Sustainable Development Fund
£30,000 awarded October 2014

A new countryside walk is to be created around Williestruther Loch, near Hawick in the Scottish Borders.

Walking around the entire circumference of this scenic loch is currently not possible, with only verge parking providing access for anglers. The award will allow the beauty spot to be opened up for the benefit of the whole community, including local residents, wildlife enthusiasts, photographers and visitors. The new path will include boardwalks, viewing platforms and a pond dipping area, and will provide a new and inspiring educational facility for local school children. At a mile long, the low level and accessible route will cater for all ages and abilities.

"The new walk will be a real asset to the town that we believe will attract locals as well as tourists."

ALLenergy

Tangy
£9,237 awarded April 2014

ALLenergy carries out a series of projects in the Argyll and Bute region which promote sustainable energy use and renewable energy generation to address fuel poverty and reduce carbon emissions.

Working with a variety of communities, businesses and households, ALLenergy runs activities such as energy education in schools and communities; affordable warmth advice, support and mentoring to combat fuel poverty; and support to community renewable energy projects and co-operatives. Last year, at least 888 vulnerable households received in-depth Affordable Warmth advice, energy education was provided to more than 3,600 people and 775 households were referred for free insulation measures.

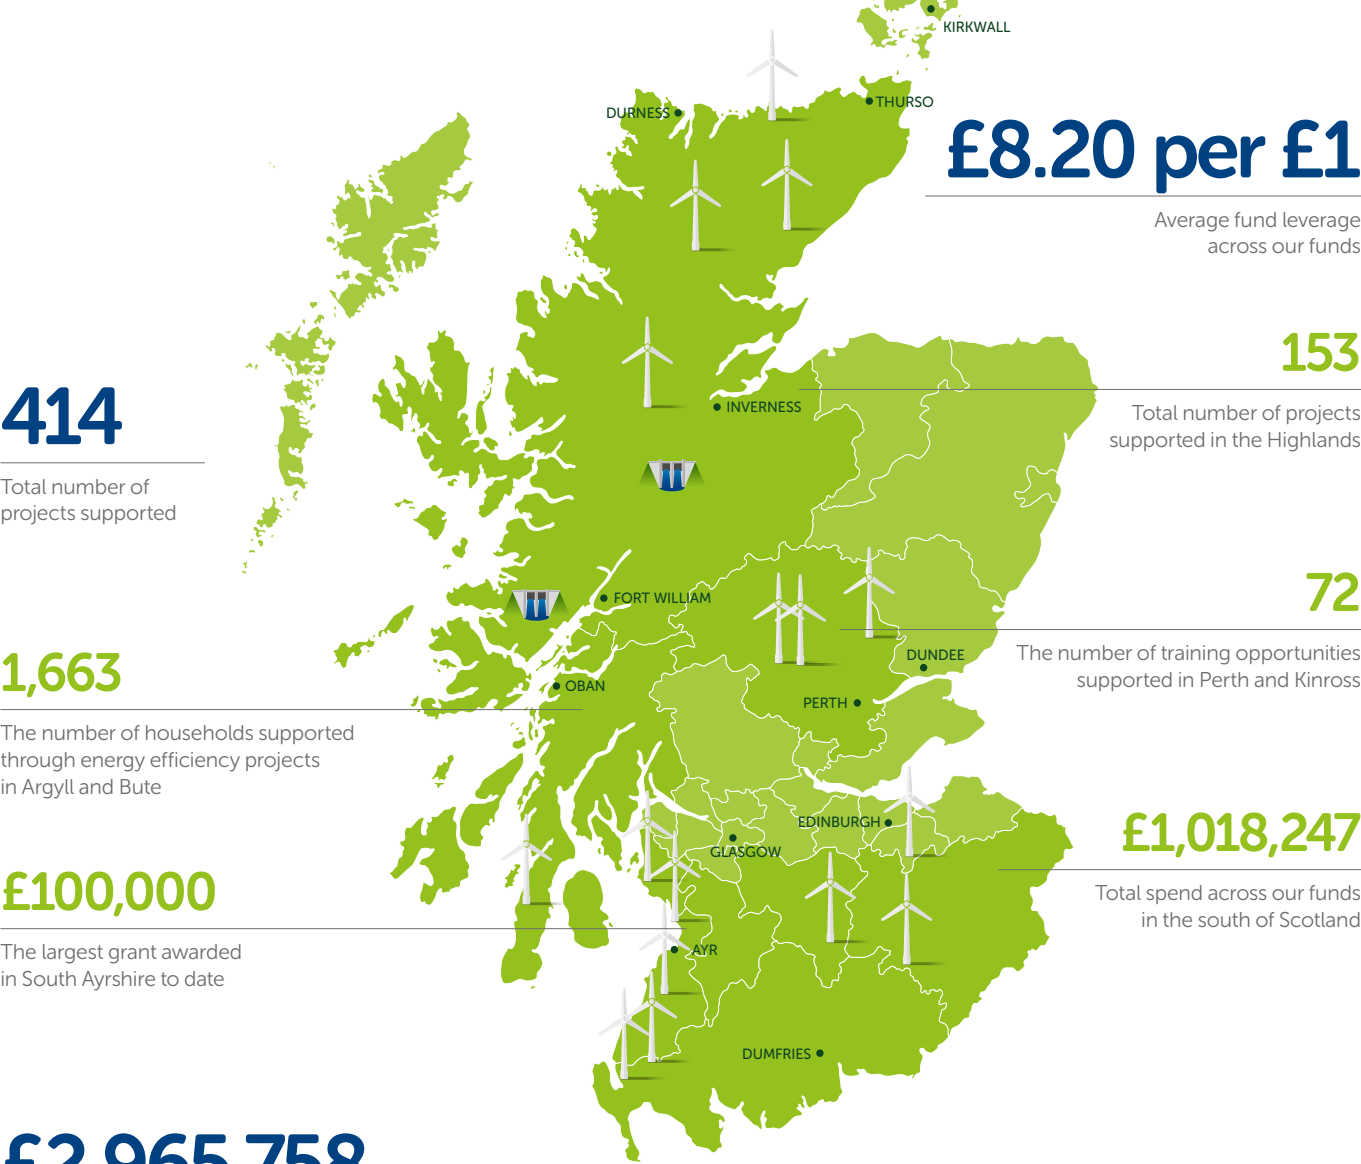

"The difference that our Affordable Warmth team makes to people's lives is significant – not just financially, it is often emotional as well."
